Yacht Description

The new model, developed and constructed in the Avigliana shipyards, is unveiled at the Genoa International Boat Show 2006. The new 47' is the latest stylistic development from Stefano Righini for the Azimut Fly Bridge range, with its characteristic superstructure windows, the skilful harmony of its dimensions and muscles and the overall dynamism that gives the impression of movement even when still. The same elegance characterises the interior: Carlo Galeazzi has developed a formal linear and modern architectural style with sophisticated details and high quality materials. The generous volume of the hull and the innovative layout inside guarantees guests aboard the 47' an unrivalled level of comfort that is not just limited to the living space. At 14,46 meters long, the Azimut 47 has a beam of 4,52 meters and two 575 mHp CAT C9 engines that can deliver a top speed of 31 knots.
